

Q: Is Recreation League different than Competitive League?

A: Yes. Recreation League Basketball is a clearing house for young players of all ages and abilities to participate in the sport. Recreation Basketball is an outlet for fun and exercise that promotes healthy competition, progressive learning of the fundamentals, and teamwork. There are no tryouts, travel team expectations, post registration player fees, or requirements for playing experience. Recreation Youth Basketball advocates for a cost-effective program that allows players to participate at a reasonable cost. Our coaches are volunteers; we partner with the School District for facility usage; and we employ high school and college athletes and students to officiate and mentor the games. Recreation League Basketball does not post scores or standings. There will not be a tournament at the end of the season. The goal of each player on each team is to develop and improve their individual skills and learn how to implement those advancements on a team to find success on the court that goes beyond winning. Cooperation and collaboration learned in Recreation Basketball serves as a springboard and as a feeder program to the next level beyond recreation play.

Q: How are teams formed?

A: Before the registration deadline, players are placed on teams taking into consideration player requests, carpool request, and middle school attendance area. Once a team reaches the maximum number of players allowed, or the registration deadline has passed, players will be placed on the next team in their middle school area or the next team that has not reached its maximum amount of players. You are not guaranteed any requests once the registration deadline has passed.

Q: What does it mean if I submitted a coach or carpool request before the registration deadline, but my player does not make it on that team.

A: There have been occurrences where a player's registration has been submitted before the registration deadline, but the player did not make it on the team the requested. This happens when a team's maximum registration number was met and the player in question did not fall into that pool of players. When teams have an abundance of players who have made the same requests for a team, the registration date and time are used to determine who will be on the team.
